Racing and Motorsports Complex

Neil is committed to the idea of building a racing and motorsports complex in Hawaii. Such a project could create many benefits, not just for racing enthusiasts and car clubs, but also for the people of Hawaii if done right as a public-private partnership. A racing complex could provide a safe and controlled alternative to dangerous street racing that is wreaking havoc on our roadways. Working collaboratively, private operators could agree to be jointly responsible for offering youth programs, creating learning opportunities for budding mechanics and engineers, demonstrating alternative fuel vehicles, and developing cultural and recreational events for visitors and local residents. The public and private sectors can also make a joint commitment to making our roads safer and acting collaboratively toward that end.
